

More than a lot of professions we are family, and in most families, you reach out to that member that is struggling and give them the support they need.

That's what Canadian Funeral Peer Support is. We are that brother or sister that always has your back. According to experts peer support is a viable option to the mental health crisis that Canada is under.

We can no longer keep on doing the same thing expecting different results. We have lost too many talented brothers and sisters to suicide or burnout to allow this to continue.

It's time to give your staff and all funeral professionals the support they need, and in return, you will have an energized, passionate workforce to take on the future of funeral service.

We have heard the call for help from across Canada. CFPS is here to answer the call.

Canadian Funeral Peer Support

What Is Peer Support?

The word peers refer to our colleagues in the funeral profession. Peer support is when one or more individuals can relate to similar experiences and provide each other with a supportive connection. This provides a healthy outlet to debrief after the hard days and an opportunity to meet other people that they can relate to and not feel alone. This allows everyone the opportunity to feel connected, validated and understood in a supportive, non-judgmental environment among those that get it.

Who We Are

We are a peer-led organization providing a safe place for people working in the funeral industry.

Mission Statement

Our Mission is to be Canada's leader in providing resources for the wellness of funeral professionals; to share our personal experiences, educate and advocate; and to foster a network of peer support groups across the country.

Our Vision

The Canadian Funeral Peer Support (CFPS) promotes wholeness and wellness by uniting funeral industry professionals through a nationwide network of regional organizations offering support, information and resources within their community.

Our Values

The Canadian Funeral Peer Support Group is committed to providing support, healing, education and knowledge to funeral professionals.

Support is the key to recovery.
